Holdup and Portion of the Money Is Recovered.

OTHER CASES REPORTED

When examined by Lieutenant Shannon the trio made a partial confession, while additional evidence of their guilt came from the identification of a pearl handled knife, which the Forest woman tried to hide in the patrol wagon. Dyer said it was the same knife he had seen in her possession when she held him up. He says he will remain in the city to prosecute the prisoners. They were denied bail.

John Doe, who was later identified as Fritz Koehler, was walking from Saltair to his home. He is recovering from a broken ankle and went out Wednesday night for the first time. Consequently, he limped a bit, and when he got his foot tangled in the broken boards of a board walk he fell all over himself. He called to a policeman and asked for help. The policeman helped him—helped him to the tent in which he was sleeping. The young man was the son of William Hurst, forest supervisor at Heaver. His sister. Margaret, who was in Salt Lake for a civil service examination, received word at the Cullen hotel yesterday of the fatal accident. She returned home last night.

Council Decides to Ask City Attorney's Opinion on Turf Gambling.

Gambling on horse races, red light stockade, health conditions in the city and water mains furnished plenty of material for discussion at the informal meetings of the city council committees last evening. The municipal laws committee took up the resolution of Councilman L. D. Martin calling on the chief of police to stop betting on the races, and after some fruitless talk referred it to the city attorney for an online. Which will probattorney for an opinion, which will probably be forthcoming after the races hav

The resolutions from west side people in regard to the stockade came up in the same connection, though these have not yet been formally received by the council. It is apparent that any action on the stockade question will be distinct from Martin's betting resolution and not tacked to it, as Councilman L. J. Wood at first proposed.

Frank Raleigh's proposition to clean up the city garbage for a gross sum of $80, e month was also talked over. It will be held until Dr. M. R. Stewart, health comheld until Dr. M. R. Stewart, health com-missioner, returns from his eastern trip. There is a strong sentiment among the councilmen in favor of some such con-tract being let, the health department having shown its inability to cope with the situation and keep the garbaze cans emptied.

The waterworks committee decided to

The waterworks committee decided to recommend that twelve sanitary drinking fountains be placed in the business district before the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. Main street will get five of these between South Temple and fourth South; State street three, at First, Second and Third South streats; West Temple street three at the same intersections, and one at Fourth South and State streets. They will cost a total of $750, or $65 each.

The committee decided to deny extension of the water mains on Fayette street from Third to Fourth West streets, and on Eleventh South between Seventh and Ninth East, Thomas Hobday, superintendent of waterworks, reporting that the first would only pay about $17 a year on the investment and the second $67 a year.

The council met for a few minutes before the committees went into session, and passed the pay rolls for the half month ending June 16, amounting to $19,-58.52. It also changed the hour of the trip over the Emigration Canyon railroad to 11 o'clock this morning instead of in the afternoon. The councilmen, with their wives, will assemble at the station of the road at Mount Olivet, and will be taken over the line by LeGrand Young.
